Spike in transit complaints due to cuts: Report

Warning. Alderman cautions against rapid expansion of LRT and busing to outlying areas in Calgary

JEREMY NOLA
jeremy.nola@metronews.ca

Rider complaints over Calgary Transit service have jumped 35 per cent compared to last year, according to city data.

And a report coming forward to a committee Wednesday clearly links that spike to service cuts instituted on various city routes in March.

"We are not surprised.... We have got a limited budget," said transit spokesperson Ron Collins.

"When we make these revisions to service, certainly we try to do it in a way that has the least impact on customers."

The heaviest onset of complaints this year was seen in March as the service-hour cuts came into effect. Calgary Transit fielded 361 service-related complaints alone that month — a 75 per cent jump over the 205 in March 2011.

City administrators are indicating those service cuts could be restored at a rough annual cost of $756,000.

That suggestion, along with concerns over limited or non-existent service to outlying Calgary areas, has led some aldermen to express support for zone-based busing models that would charge commuters based on distance travelled, peak-hour fare hikes and a reinstatement of the $3 park-and-ride fee.

But Ald. Andre Chabot cautioned against throwing money at rapid-transit expansion.

"Adding extra levels of service in areas where the demand isn't necessarily there can only create animosity when it doesn't pan out and we have to cut service back," he said.

Impaired driving. No loopholes in new legislation

Attempting to find a loophole in Alberta's new impaired-driving legislation may actually do more harm than good in the courtroom, police and lawyers suggested Tuesday.

After Alberta Transportation Minister Ric McIver laid out plans for tougher sanctions for both .05 and .08 infractions Tuesday, talk emerged on a local radio station and social media about ways to get around the mandatory licence suspensions — namely refusing to provide a breath sample to police.

Not so fast, said police Sgt. Rick Butler.

"If you don't provide a breath sample, you are facing immediate, very strict sanctions," he said, adding the penalties would be identical to a .08 charge — an indefinite licence suspension and a requirement to install and pay for an ignition-interlock system in your vehicle for a one-year minimum.

Local defence lawyer Danusia Bourdon said she generally advises accused impaired drivers to provide the breath samples, as it can be tougher to fight a refusal-to-provide charge.

"They (clients) have kind of sealed their fate by refusing," she said.

Other lawyers speaking to Metro Tuesday did not take as hardline of an approach, noting each case is different and accused drivers do have the right to seek counsel before providing a second reading at a police district office.

"I have got one foolproof method to beat the system," said lawyer Bob Sawers. "Don't drink and drive."

New laws could lead to driving-test rush

Penalties. Stricter rules for Graduated Driver Licensing program part of legislation

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolaïs@metronews.ca

Tougher sanctions for Alberta's newest drivers are fuelling efforts to fast-track advanced road tests, say some Calgary driving instructors.

Starting July 1, any Albertan on the two-year Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL) program who is found to have alcohol in their system while behind the wheel will be subject to a 30-day driving suspension and a seven-day vehicle seizure. While alcohol consumption has always been prohibited for GDL drivers, the penalties are a step up from measures currently in place, as drivers will also be required to spend another full year on the program for each suspension they are dealt.

And that fear is why Drashko Vujanovic, owner and chief instructor at Proactive Calgary Driving School, believes he has seen a 30 to 50 per cent rise in customers taking a crack at their advanced road test in recent months.

"We are getting far more calls," he said. "People are trying to get out of the GDL now."

Other driving schools have not necessarily seen a surge in test requests, but anticipate that will come as the new impaired-driving legislation begins its phased introduction July 1.

"People always leave things to the last minute," said Sue Beauferris with Derek Brown's Academy of Driving School.

But while he welcomes the boost in business, Vujanovic cautioned against rushing into an advanced road test and said the new laws are intended to protect drivers as far as he's concerned.

"People need to obey the laws whether they have the GDL or a bus pass," he said.

Ravinder Punia, an instructor of three years with Moga Driving School, agreed, adding most of his students support the new legislation.

"I don't think this will make much difference," he

Stampede prizes to match grandiosity of centennial

Prizes unveiled. Trucks, boats and motorcycles are up for grabs

KATIE TURNER
katie.turner@metronews.ca

This year's Calgary Stampede Lotteries prizes pay homage to the 100-year celebration with $1.2 million in bigger and better items up for grabs.

First vice-chair of the Stampede Lotteries Committee Rick Kuzyk said he was blown away when he first walked through the Rotary Dream Home, valued at nearly $746,000.

"If this thing doesn't scream centennial to you, I don't know what will," he said.

In addition to the three-bedroom, two-and-a-half bathroom home, other Stampede-themed prizes included a Harley Davidson with custom western paint and a 2012 Stampede Centennial GMC Sierra — one of 500 made especially for the anniversary.

"I think we're proud of what

As one of five organizations that benefits from lottery sales, Inn From The Cold's Bonnie Elgie said they hope this year's prizes mean even more funds are raised.

"I think (the prizes) are fantastic and hopefully motivate the community to buy lots and lots of tickets," she said. "We know in the last decade, we've received approximately $180,000 from Rotary Club South.... We're bracing ourselves for a really busy summer ... so we would really appreciate a nice lift in funding."

Wife of U of A shooting victim 'cautiously optimistic'

Memorial flowers are left at the operations offices of G4S in Edmonton Saturday after three people were killed in a shootout at a University of Alberta residence last week. JIAN JACKSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The wife of the lone survivor of an armoured-car shooting and robbery at the University of Alberta's HUB Mall last week released a statement Tuesday.

Cpl. Matthew Schuman, a military firefighter who held a second job at G4S, is listed as critical but stable, said the statement, signed Jennifer and family.

"I was in absolute shock when I received the phone call at 1 a.m. that Matthew was involved in an accident," Jennifer said.

Grieving families

"I can't begin to fathom the grief the families of the other victims must be experiencing."

Jennifer, wife of Matthew Schuman

On Sunday, Matthew opened his eyes for the first time and squeezed her hand, she said.

"We remain cautiously optimistic that his condition will improve," reads the statement.

Travis Baumgartner, 21, faces numerous charges, among them first-degree murder in the deaths of armoured-car guards Eddie Rejano, 39, Michelle Shegelski, 26, and Brian Ilesic, 35.

He was arrested Saturday at the U.S. border, and could be back in Edmonton as soon as Wednesday.

The news "relieved" Jennifer.

"His actions have angered an entire country, and I hope that at one point he can comprehend the level of damage he has done," reads the statement.

Jennifer closed the statement thanking the public for its support and generosity, noting a trust fund has been set up at the Royal Bank of Canada.

Big birthday present. Stampede receives $11M ranch as centennial gift

The Calgary Stampede Foundation was presented with an historic gift to mark its 100th birthday on Tuesday.

Calgary businessman and philanthropist Bill Siebens generously donated 8,000 acres of land to the foundation.

The southwestern Alberta OH Ranch is valued at over $11 million and includes not only the historic buildings on the property but also the well-known OH brand along with the OH branding irons.

The largest private gift ever received by the Stampede Foundation will be jointly managed with the Stampede to further the organizations' shared mission to preserve and promote western heritage and values.

In a released statement, Bill Siebens said the Stampede is "an important link to Alberta's past — the ranchers, the homesteaders, the cowboys and the Aboriginal people. This land will give Albertans a big, beautiful connection to their past — a connection that will endure for many future generations." METRO

The suspect is described as approximately six feet tall, Caucasian and between 30 and 35 years old with very short brown hair.

Police do not believe that the incident is related to the alleged attempted sexual assault that took place on Monday near Glenmore Landing.

Lawyer lends voice to dance troupe's appeal

Meeting. Province is 'considering' the concerns brought up by Shen Yun after Jubilee performances were cancelled

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

After learning of concerns being raised by a Chinese dance troupe barred from future Alberta performances, a Winnipeg lawyer is volunteering his support to advocate on their behalf.

This comes as representatives of the Shen Yun Performing Arts Group and the Alberta government expressed optimism on a resolution to their dispute following a meeting held last week.

Shen Yun was informed earlier this year by Alberta Culture Minister Heather Kilmchuk it would no longer be allowed to perform at the Jubilee Auditoriums in both Calgary and Edmonton after going public with performance concerns.

That directive, though, drew more complaints from local Shen Yun hosts, the Falun Dafa Association, and Calgary MP Rob Anders, who claimed the province was acting on behalf of the Chinese government, which has long been accused of suppressing the performance group's pre-Communist

Anders' assertion is one supported by Winnipeg human-rights lawyer David Matas, who voluntarily sent a letter to the ministry advocating for the reinstatement ment of Alberta's Shen Yun shows in the years ahead.

"They are repressed in fundamental ways ... but it often happens through these performances," he said. "They do blend the ancient Chinese and modern musical instruments. I have never seen anything else like it."

Culture Minister spokesperson John Tuckwell said the concerns raised by Shen Yun supporters are under review. "We are currently considering points and positions that Falun Dafa put forward and are formulating a response," he said.

Kenney sorry for
'a-hole' comment

Immigration Minister Jason Kenney finally apologized on Tuesday for issuing a profane insult against Alberta's deputy premier — but only after spending much of the day refusing to acknowledge he'd done anything amiss.

The apology came after Kenney faced a barrage of opposition demands to say he's sorry for calling Thomas Lukaszuk "a complete and utter a-hole" in an email to Tory MPs.

Environmental groups say they are seeing a disturbing trend in the way the Alberta government has been dealing with its threatened grizzly bear population.

The latest report shows a growing numbers of bears are being trapped and moved by provincial wildlife staff.

In 2011, 24 bears were trapped and moved, compared to 13 in 2010 and 16 in 2009. Nigel Douglas of the Alberta Wilderness

Association says it appears the grizzlies are looking for easy food sources such as leaking granaries and cattle herds in the foothills. Dave Ealey of Alberta Sustainable Resources says the relocations are being done to protect the public and prevent the need to kill nuisance bears.

Tenants' illegal dumping a major expense for building owners

Cleanup. Furniture, garbage and other refuse being left for management to dispose of

CELESTE
DE MUELENAERE
Calgary@metronews.ca

Dumpsters are overflowing at city rental properties, but many owners say most of the refuse is illegally dumped.

Michael Guyette, vice-president of operations for Boardwalk Rental Communities, said although it's impossible to put an exact number on it, illegal dumping at the company's 32 Calgary-area buildings is a major year-round expense.

"Boardwalk spends thousands of dollars each year collecting and transporting this material to the landfill," Guyette said, adding it's a daily issue, not just month's end.

But Guyette notes it is not just moving tenants who are responsible. Neighbourhood

- Barbara Engelbart, communications representative for Goodwill Industries Alberta, said it's unfortunate people are choosing illegal dumping rather than donating unwanted items at any of its nine Calgary locations.

residents and passersby also drop their furniture and debris off for Boardwalk to deal with at the company's expense.

"Our garbage bins are outside and, quite frankly, every individual feels they have a right to drop their garbage off there," he said. "It's so bad at some properties, we actually leave a trailer beside the garbage bin or close to it."

In one case, residents from an apartment across the street from a Boardwalk building were told by their landlord to leave the landfill cost for Boardwalk by dumping unwanted belongings in its bins.

Tenants and neighbourhood residents who dump their garbage in apartment-building dumpsters — or elsewhere on the property — are the source of a major yearly expense for landlords, says Michael Guyette of Boardwalk Rental Communities. CELESTE DE MUELENAERE/FOR METRO

Junior Miss Calgary 2011, Taylor Ernst, 12, has her eyebrows waxed at Edges Salon & Spa. ALICIA GERRIOR/FOR METRO

No waning in city pre-teen waxing

New Trend. Moms are taking their little girls for waxes

ALICIA GERRIOR
calgary@metronews.ca

Calgary salons are seeing an emerging trend: an increasing number of pre-teen girls are coming through the doors for waxing.

Several Calgary salons are noting that girls as young as 9 or 10 are having their hair removed.

"We're seeing more and more girls of 12 years," said Wendy Neufeld, owner of Merle Norman, Quarry Park.

Guia Ernst began taking her 12-year-old daughter for eyebrow waxes last year.

"If it makes the child feel better about themselves and gives them more confidence, then I don't see anything wrong with it," said

Quoted

Ernst.

According to Mike Chammoury, owner of Edges Salon & Spa, it can be beneficial for girls to begin hair removal while they're young.

"The younger, the better," said Chammoury.

He said girls can begin laser hair removal as young as eight because the follicles are smaller and easier to remove.

But Chammoury is adamant that the purpose of removing hair at a young age is for confidence and taking care of one's self.

"Removing hair for young girls is not encouraging anything to do with sexuality," he said.

But not everyone agrees with pre-teen waxing. Child psychologist, Murray Molohon warned that waxing could affect young girls' self-esteem later in life.

"If it's an overemphasis on image and less emphasis on who the person is, then it's probably going to have lifelong effects," he said.

Dog limits in off-leash areas of concern to some

The city's bylaw and animal services is reviewing the responsible pet ownership bylaw and one thing they're looking at is the number of dogs an individual should have off-leash in an off-leash area.

In May, Calgarians were asked to fill out an online survey and Bill Bruce, bylaw boss, said they received good responses.

"We're coming up with numbers between three and six, depending on who we talk to," he said, adding public consultation would continue before council presentation, likely next spring.

Currently there is no limit, but dogs must be under control, within sight and responsive to commands at all times.

The limit would apply to everyone, including dog walkers. And while they're not opposed to a limit, Lauren Banman, owner of Calgary Dog Walk, said a lower number would essentially kill their business, and also raise prices.

She said general consensus between companies is eight to 10 dogs. She walks eight at a time — a good pack number she can control and constantly watch.

"I think there's a lot of people who can walk 10 dogs, walk 15, but I don't think that's a healthy number for the parks," she explained.

Bruce said they'll be holding discussions with dog walkers before making any recommendations.

Transport fuel? Province looking for more ways to use natural-gas resources

Alberta's premier says the province is looking at ways to boost the use of natural gas, including using it as a transportation fuel.

Alison Redford concedes there are barriers to the idea, including the great expense of building refuelling infrastructure and the high upfront cost of vehicles that can run on natural gas.

But she says it's worth having a conversation about making the switch.

Natural gas has been trading at dismal prices for a long time, a situation Redford calls the new normal.

She says natural gas made up about 60 per cent of all provincial resource revenues in 2005, a figure

Pattison Outdoor. Greenpeace billboard rejected in Edmonton

A billboard company won't say why a Greenpeace ad touting solar energy over oil spills was rejected.

The proposed billboard for downtown Edmonton featured the text: "When there is a huge solar energy spill it's just called a nice day. Green jobs, not more oil spills." The words were set against an orange background with no photos or artwork.

"It was a fairly light-hearted ad in my opinion," said Greenpeace spokesman Mike Hudema.

Greenpeace said it was told by Pattison Outdoor on June 13 that it could have a billboard at Jasper Avenue and 106th Street, not far from the Alberta legislature.

The cost was $2,800 and the ad was to run for one month.

Two days later, however, Greenpeace was told the artwork had not been approved.

Follow up with the company didn't yield any further explanation.

Magnotta pleads not guilty in his first court appearance

Body-parts case.

One day after arriving from Germany, accused killer is impassive in video link

Luka Rocco Magnotta has pleaded not guilty in the body-parts case, appearing calm Tuesday in his first court session.

Projected into the Montreal courtroom by video link, Magnotta protested his innocence in the slaying-and-dismemberment case that has drawn world attention.

His appearance lasted about three minutes.

Magnotta was impassive as he appeared onscreen at the courthouse.

Actually, he was standing at a police station in a different part of the city, flanked by a guard.

The 29-year-old murder suspect had arrived in Canada the previous day, shackled as he was returned from Germany aboard a military plane.

Magnotta, a self-described porn actor and prostitute, faces five charges, including first-degree murder, defiling a corpse, and harassing Prime Minister Stephen Harper and members of Parliament, as well as publishing and mailing obscene material.

He is accused of killing and dismembering Montreal university student Jun Lin, mailing out his body parts to different places, including the Ottawa offices of the Conservative Party of Canada, and posting a video of the events on the Internet.

Appearing before Justice Lori-Renee Weitzman, Magnotta pleaded not guilty through his lawyer Pierre Pannacio.

The case returns to court on Thursday, again by video, to discuss a motion to have Magnotta evaluated.

Hosni Mubarak on life support, adding to uncertainty in Egypt

Crisis in Cairo.

Questions arise over former leader's successor — and whether the position still holds power

Egypt's Hosni Mubarak was being kept alive by life support after he was rushed from prison to a military hospital in a rapidly worsening condition, officials said. The 84-year-old ousted leader's health crisis added a new element of uncertainty just as a potentially explosive fight opened over who will succeed him.

The state news agency MENA said Mubarak was "clinically dead" when he arrived at the hospital and that doctors used a defibrillator on him several times. It initially said the efforts were not successful.

But the official said Mubarak was put on life support. He had no further details on his condition. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to talk to the press.

The developments add further layers to what is threatening to become a new chapter of unrest and political power struggles in Egypt, 16 months after Mubarak was ousted by a popular uprising demanding democracy. Egyptians were uncertain about Mubarak's fate, about who will succeed him and about whether his successor will have any power.

The campaign of Mubarak's former prime minister, Ahmed Shafiq, said Tuesday he has won Egypt's presidential election, countering the Muslim Brotherhood's claim of victory for its candidate, Mohammed Morsi.

The election commission is to announce the official final results on Thursday and no matter who it names as victor, his rival is likely to reject the result as a fraud. If Shafiq is declared winner in particular, it could spark an explosive backlash from the Brotherhood.

The Brotherhood, Egypt's most powerful political group, is already escalating its challenge against the ruling military over the generals' move this week to give themselves overwhelming authority over the next president.

Some 50,000 protesters, mostly Islamists, massed in Cairo's Tahrir Square on Tuesday evening chanting slogans in support of Morsi and denouncing the generals' power grab.

Syria. Government ready to evacuate besieged Homs

Syria's government said Tuesday it was ready to act on a UN call to evacuate civilians trapped in the rebellious central city of Homs for more than a week, but blamed rebels for obstructing efforts to get them out.

Maj.-Gen. Robert Mood, chief of the UN observer mission in the country, has demanded that all warring parties in the conflict allow safe passage for women, children and sick people who need to leave the city and other combat zones.

Activists said shelling and clashes between rebel fighters and troops in Homs continued unabated Tuesday, underlining the difficulty in organizing any sort of evacuation. Fierce shelling was reported on the rebel-held districts of Khaldiyeh and Jouret el-Shayeh and nearby areas. Troops backed by helicopter gunships were also bombarding the town of Rastan, north of Homs, which is controlled by rebels.

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights reiterated an urgent appeal for world leaders to intervene to stop the shelling that has trapped more than Activists say around 1,000 families have been trapped by ongoing government assaults in Homs.

- The UN said Saturday its 300 observers based in Syria were suspending all missions because of concerns for their safety after fighting intensified over the previous 10 days.

1,000 families and "the systematic killings that the Syrian people in Homs are being subjected to."

A Foreign Ministry statement carried by state-run news agency SANA said the government has contacted the UN observer mission and local authorities in Homs to start efforts to bring out the trapped civilians.

"But the efforts of the UN monitors' mission failed in achieving this goal because of the armed terrorist groups' obstructions," the statement said. It charged that armed groups were using innocent civilians as "human shields."

Greece. Coalition government could take over by Wednesday

A coalition government could be formed by mid-Wednesday in Greece, the head of the country's socialist party said Tuesday, easing the nation out of a political limbo as it struggles to deal with a financial crisis that is already affecting Europe's economy and markets around the world.

Evangelos Venizelos' socialist PASOK party came third in Sunday's elections. At the core of any administration will be Antonis Samaras' conservative New Democracy party, which came first in Sunday's vote and won 129 of Parliament's 300 seats — short of the 151 needed to govern alone.

Venizelos, who handled Greece's negotiations with its international creditors for several months last year as finance minister, said the government would have the support of the election winner, PASOK and the small Democratic Left party of Fotis Kouvelis, which won 17 seats.

His party, he said, “will support this government sincerely and will participate in it in the most beneficial way in order to make it effective and credible.”

PASOK would convene its deputies Wednesday morning to define exactly how the party would participate in the government, he said.

Norway

Breivik says trial shouldn't focus on his sanity

Confessed Norwegian mass killer Anders Behring Breivik says his trial has centred too much on his mental state, and should instead focus on those who lost their lives and politics.

The anti-Muslim fanatic, who killed 77 people last year in a bomb attack and shooting spree, has admitted to the killings but denies criminal guilt because he considers the victims traitors to Norway for supporting immigration.

Breivik said Tuesday the trial should focus on the “political reasons” for his attacks.

Five Congo rebel leaders may be responsible for war crimes: UN

The UN's top human-rights official on Tuesday named five Congo rebel leaders who she says may be responsible for war crimes, a rare step prompted by concerns that their group — known as M23 — could continue to rape and kill civilians in the east of the country. Navi Pillay, the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, frequently speaks out about serious abuses being committed around the world, but it is unusual for her to single out individuals unless they are suspected of being responsible for atrocities.

On stilts no less! 150 years before Nik Wallenda was daredevil Charles Blondin

One hundred and fifty years before wire walker Nik Wallenda crossed Niagara Falls, a Victoria woman's relative was walking a tightrope across the Niagara Gorge — on stilts. "He did it on a hemp rope," said Linda Seabrook, the great-great-granddaughter of daredevil Charles Blondin.

Wallenda made the crossing in Niagara Falls last Friday to a televised audience of millions.

Despite his protests, he was strapped to the wire with a harness at the request of ABC television.

Seabrook says that, unlike Wallenda, her ancestor walked across the Niagara River without a safety net multiple times.

Berlin. Dutch man who claimed memory loss faces fraud investigation Tough times may be ahead for the Dutch man who claimed for months he was a teenager with memory loss who had been living in woods outside Berlin.

Police said Tuesday they've opened a fraud investigation against Robin van Helsum. Berlin youth authorities are tallying the costs of nine months care and want it back.

Van Helsum's story fell apart last week after he was identified from a photograph police put out. He admitted fabricating a story his parents were dead and not knowing who he was or where he was from.

Berlin youth services spokesman Ed Koch says his office will file a complaint once it determines how much it spent on him.

Freed: Student whose webcam spied on a gay kiss

Rutgers University tragedy. Student who was 'outed' killed himself soon after, sparking furor over gay bullying

An Indian-born former university student who was convicted of webcam spying that led to a suicide was released from jail Tuesday.

Dharun Ravi, 20, a former Rutgers University student, had served 20 days of a 30-day sentence.

Ravi's webcam caught roommate Tyler Clementi kissing another man.

Ravi told others about it in person, in texts, instant messages and tweets

Days later, Clementi, 18, committed suicide.

The case sparked a furor over gay bullying.

Webcam spy Dharun Ravi walks out of jail in New Brunswick, N.J., on Tuesday.

MEL EVANS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ravi was not charged with the death, but he was convicted earlier this year of 15 criminal counts.

The 30 days in jail was far less than the 10-year prison sentence Ravi could have received.

He still faces three years of probation, plus more than $11,000 in fines and assessments, 300 hours of community service and counselling.

Federal immigration authorities said Monday that Ravi will not be deported to his native India. He lived there until he was five years old and remains a citizen, though he is in the United States legally.

Foreign citizens convicted of crimes in the U.S. can face deportation — usually after they complete their prison or jail terms.

Ravi's supporters, particularly from the Indian community, argued for leniency in part to make it less likely that he would be deported.

Ravi reported to jail in New Jersey on May 31, though he could have remained free while his case is appealed. He did not stop to speak with the media when he was released.

American Civil Liberties Union issues scathing report citing human-rights abuses, injustice

The American Civil Liberties Union called on the U.S. Justice Department to take control of the Puerto Rican police force and ensure reforms are carried out in a report issued Tuesday that says the department's officers routinely use excessive force, killing at least 21 people in the past two years.

RIO+20 IS SENDING OUT

Environment. Metro talks to the Blue Marine Foundation and other experts about how to stop trashing our oceans

MICHELLE CASTILLO
Metro World News

From June 20 to 22, leaders, officials and advocates from the private and public sectors will meet in Rio de Janeiro for the United Nations' Conference on Sustainable Development, otherwise known as Rio+20. Topics up for discussion include how to solve global poverty, social inequality and the destruction of the environment.

Easy, right? Yeah, sure.

But those planning to attend say the gathering will make a difference, especially for marine advocates. "Rio can go a long way to help our oceans," says Charles Clover, chairman of the Blue Marine Foundation. His organization, which worked with Metro to put together this feature, was created in 2010, and aims to "create marine reserves and private-sector solutions in the sea, which enable fisheries to be restructured to promote sustainable fishing."

Clover says the task is a vital one because the reserves keep fish and other wildlife safe from the destruction wreaked on them almost everywhere else in the oceans by fishing fleets and problems including climate change and pollution. Fishing sustainably also means fishermen can earn a living now and in the future.

"What we really want and need from Rio," Clover says, "is a ratified system of governance for the high seas which would replace the present lack of fishing regulations. They encourage a devastating free-for-all. As part of this, we want Rio to make it possible to create marine reserves in international waters, something that just can't be done as things stand but which is desperately important."

Blue Marine not alone

Another group with an agenda for positive change is the International Ocean Institute (IOI), based in Malta. The non-profit group hopes to convince nations at Rio to adopt policies to protect our big blue wonders.

"Perhaps Rio can be the wake-up call to the unconscionable attitude humans have toward the ocean, and that our very survival depends on bridging the governance deficit in managing our ocean," says Dr. Awni Behnam, president of IOI.

Pollution is his main concern. Behnam estimates that more than 46,000 pieces of plastic are floating in every square mile of ocean. The concentration is especially high in the North Pacific Gyre in an area known as the Great Pacific Garbage Patch.

Ocean currents push all the trash into this area, even if the pollution was deposited from other parts of the world. It's also why scientists see garbage in the most remote parts of the Arctic, more than 1,000 kilometres away from major populations.

"The human-trash problem is not just a cleanliness issue per se, but a really insidious problem," says Steve Gittings, science co-ordinator for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Marine Sanctuary Program, a U.S. government organization.

Not only does the garbage not break down, but it's also invisible, says Dr. Simon Boxall of the National Oceanography Centre. "This isn't some big pile of bags and bottles that we can go and scoop up. It's microscopic dust particles, as the bigger items break down mechanically," he says.

The overall pollution in our environment leads to climate change and ocean acidification, which occurs when the pH level rises, making the water more acidic. Dr. Scott Doney, a senior scientist of marine chemistry and geochemistry at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Woods Hole, Mass., says it occurs when humans burn fossil fuels, producing carbon dioxide, which is absorbed by the ocean and changes the seawater chemistry.

"There aren't any specific human health issues that have come up yet, but what's concerning is that a lot of plants and animals that people depend on appear to be sensitive to changes," Doney says.

So, to sum up...

Overfishing, pollution, climate change — heavy stuff. The key is getting governments on board to help change laws to make regulation easier. "Climate change, for example," Gittings says. "No one seems to want to step up and make the major policy decisions. It's a tricky and costly one."

Organizers hope the Rio+20 conference will provide the push governments need to take action.

A man-made threat. How we create toxic algae

Watch where you throw out that empty plastic pop bottle! Up to one million seabirds and 100,000 mammals die each year from trash-related problems, the IOI says. Bags routinely choke turtles and sea gulls, and if they ingest plastic pieces, it can act as a magnet for other contaminants that cause cancer.

Another issue: Hypoxia eutrophication — which has been attributed to the rise in agricultural chemicals, industrial byproducts and waste from population growth — depletes oxygen in our oceans and causes conditions for harmful algae to proliferate. As animals die and the algae use up all the available oxygen (releasing more carbon dioxide in exchange), this creates what Lisa Levin, director of the Scripps Center for Marine Biodiversity and Conservation, calls oxygen "dead zones." That's a term you never want to hear when about to go for a swim. METRO

Let's think about the impact next time we drive. THINKSTOCK

Need for speed. Drilling has us tearing up seabed

Demand for fossil fuels is driving more companies to drill for oil under the sea. Besides the noise pollution that affects animals that depend on sonar and vocalization to communicate, drilling brings in other contaminants and extra boat traffic, changing the animals' habitat.

"Deep-sea oil and gas and energy extraction already has the potential for major accidents," says Lisa Levin the Scripps Center. "Now, mining companies are set to mine precious metals in the deep ocean. They target countries with limited regulations when it comes to the deep sea."

Through current legislation has created some worldwide marine protectorates, and some countries have taken steps to protect their oceans through clean-seas acts and laws that regulate ship waste, not much will change unless people are willing to change their habits. METRO

AN SOS: SAVE OUR SEAS

In need of a lifeline

Who killed all the fish?

In the 19th century, visitors to European coastal resorts were often greeted with the sight of huge skates hanging from wooden stakes along the shore, some the size of dining tables. The meat of these fish was considered too tough and rank to be eaten fresh, but a few days in the open air softened them up nicely.

Such giants are unfamiliar to modern shoppers because there are virtually none left. Even by the mid-19th century they had begun to decline as bottom trawlers dragged their nets across ever larger areas of seabed, and hook-studded longlines stretched farther.

The common skate is but one of dozens of fish that have come and gone from markets in the past century. Fisheries the world over made the revolutionary transition to engine power in about 1900, allowing boats to deploy bigger nets and fish deeper and farther offshore.

Add fast-freezing to the package — an invention of American entrepreneur Clarence Birdseye in the 1920s — and fishermen were freed to move into the haunts of exotic new species.

Rachel Carson, whose book Silent Spring started the environmental movement 50 years ago, wrote a pamphlet in 1943 urging housewives to try new fish species. Two of her picks, the rose fish and the wolf fish, enjoyed a brief boom in catches. But stocks rapidly collapsed and they are scarce today.

Orange roughy, another deepwater fish, burst onto markets in Australia and then across the world in the 1980s when huge stocks were discovered 1,000 metres down, only to collapse a few years later.

There is a good chance that a recent favourite from Antarctic waters, the Patagonian toothfish, known as Chilean seabass to North Americans, will soon follow the roughy's fate.

Elsewhere, the ongoing collapse of the bluefin tuna — the world's most expensive fish — could see them disappear from the table within a few years.

In an oft-repeated pattern, big predators such as bluefin decline quickly and are replaced by animals from lower down the food chain, like prawns and squid. In the past, we shunned these species and threw them back or used them as bait.

Some kinds of seafood have boomed, busted and made a comeback as fish farms have spread, such as oysters which were popular among common people before the end of the 19th century but in the early 20th century most stocks had collapsed from overfishing, disease and pollution. Today fresh oysters are back on the menu, as sweet and delicious as ever.

Unless overfishing is brought under control, we will see further losses of common seafood species, and many scientists predict a future in which we must eat jellyfish or plankton for want of anything else.

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News

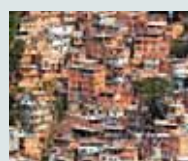

Toxic oceans

Acidification and resource depletion of the world's seas will be addressed at a dedicated Oceans Day. Themes will include how to deal with disasters such as the BP Gulf of Mexico oil spill.

The $4-trillion question

The UN hopes to sign up 7,000 businesses to invest in clean technology that will have an estimated value of $4 trillion US.

Slum rehab

Host country Brazil has led the way in building economic hubs in shantytowns, establishing construction and waste-management groups. Other nations will explore ways to solve poverty and develop infrastructure.

BRIC party

This year's conference is driven by Brazil, Russia, India and China — the newly advanced economies known collectively as BRIC. It's an opportunity for new players to gain influence.

Collapse?

At press time, only 20 per cent of the Rio+20 draft text agreement had been finalized, amid reports of deep divisions, which led WWF director Jim Leape to predict either a "meaningless agreement or complete collapse."

Suzuki

It is all too easy to believe that news on the state of fish stocks amounts to a relentless counsel of doom, but, fortunately, there is a more positive story emerging.

Research conducted by my International Sustainability Unit (I.S.U.) reveals that, in many parts of the world, steps are being taken to establish a much more sustainable way of managing these vital self-renewing resources.

In 2008, developing countries exported about $27 billion worth of fish. Fishing supports the livelihoods of more than 120 million people, and one billion people rely on fish as their main source of protein. So it is important to see that what many call an environmental problem is also an economic and social one. As long as there are fish to catch, many millions of people enjoy job security and the social cohesion that comes from that.

And it could get better. The World Bank recently estimated that an extra $50 billion a year could come from annual catches if better management were put in place. Analysis by my I.S.U. team has shown that many examples of better practice around the world are underpinned by three factors.

First, they have all been implemented with the understanding that fish don't exist in isolation from the environments that sustain them. There are many tools available to help manage fish stocks in ways that respect ecosystems — things like improving fishing gear, protecting stocks during spawning, setting aside protected areas or taking a precautionary approach to exploitation.

The second characteristic is the creation of well-designed rules for intelligent fishing that are enforced robustly. This includes proper monitoring and appropriate penalties to deter illegal fishing.

Finally, there is sound economics. Good management of fish stocks is rewarded with secure and decent livelihoods for those who do the fishing.

One way to achieve this would be to improve labelling to encourage consumers to demand more sustainable seafood. Another is the establishment of long-term rights that give fishers a stake in the future of their fishing grounds.

It seems to me that it would also make a tremendous difference if official subsidies really focused on supporting socially and environmentally positive activities. All too often, better ways of doing things are inadvertently penalized by how subsidy systems work.

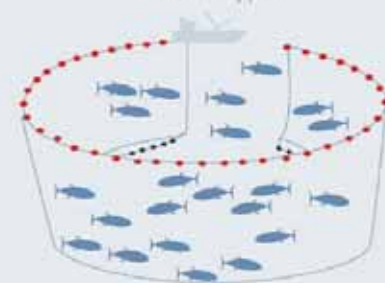

I find it encouraging that there are many examples of positive progress, from the U.S. to Indonesia and from Iceland to Vietnam, where fishing communities are adopting the approaches needed to rebuild fish stocks. The urgent question, it seems to me, is how can these examples of best practice be spread?

One powerful way to do this is through a process I have employed for many years in other sectors — what might be called "seeing is believing." This, simply put, involves inspiring people to change their behaviour through showing them what is already being done through successful examples of best practice. My hope is that my I.S.U. can play a small role in this.

Genuine multi-stakeholder partnerships must urgently be pursued to introduce best practice sustainable fisheries management to all corners of the world. Everyone can play their part, including consumers. They can become more aware of the choices they make and ensure the fish on their plates is sustainably sourced. When you consider that the alternative is the continued decline of the world's fish stocks, I fear that we really have no other choice.

HOW SUSTAINABLE FISHING WORKS

A step-by-step look at how one company, PNA Western and Central Pacific skipjack tuna fishery, makes it happen.

STEP ONE

Catches fish using purse seine net. Shoals are surrounded, the bottom is drawn tight shut and the fish are hauled out in what is in effect a huge string bag.

Among the sustainable measures in place: Fish aggregation devices (FADs), floating platforms which attract the fish but also other species, are banned. Also, vessels are limited in how long they are allowed to stay out at sea. And observers accompany each vessel to monitor catches.

STEP TWO

Once on board the fish are stored in holds and frozen.

STEP THREE

They are taken to port for unloading. Transferring catches at sea is banned.

STEP FOUR

Catches landed at port are sent either direct to Pacific Island factories for processing and canning or are loaded into ships to be transported to factories in other parts of the world. Most of the catch is exported under the brand name Pacific. Pacific is a joint venture between the PNA and the Netherlands company Sustaina. Among the aims of Pacific are to promote sustainable fishing, provide local employment and offer tuna to customers at affordable prices (as opposed to paying a premium for sustainably sourced fish).

STEP FIVE

The main customers are the US, UK, Japan and Korea. PNA controls around 30% of the global tuna supply, and 4 million square miles of sea.

It produces 267,000 tonnes annually, enough for 2.67 billion tuna sandwiches.

Cost-of-living survey. Toronto judged most expensive city in Canada

A new global survey rates Toronto and Vancouver as among the most expensive cities in North America for expatriates locating there.

The new Mercer cost-of-living survey places Toronto at No. 61 and Vancouver at No. 63 among 214 world cities assessed in cost of living for expatriates.

Only New York at No. 33 is more expensive in North America.

But North America remains relatively cheap by world standards, beaten by cities in Asia, Europe, Russia, South America, Australia and Africa.

The top three spots went to Tokyo, Luanda, Angola,

By the numbers

- Other Canadian cities to make the list were Montreal at 87, Calgary at 92 and Ottawa, the least-expensive of the group, at 115.
- The survey measures the comparative costs of over 200 items, including housing, transport and food.

and Osaka, Japan. The least-expensive city is Karachi, Pakistan, assessed as less than one-third as expensive as Tokyo.

Canada leaves summit with invite to trade talks

Summit ends. World leaders call on Europe to take action on eurozone's continuing financial crisis

Prime Minister Stephen Harper leaves the G20 summit in Mexico with an invite to pull up a chair at major trade talks, and newfound confidence that Europe will take bold action to get its economic house in order.

The two-day summit closed Tuesday with leaders of the world's 20 most important economies urging their European counterparts to break the vicious circle of debt-burdened banks and cash-strapped countries.

Quoted

"A TPP agreement will ... provide greater economic opportunity for Canadians."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper, on Canada joining the Trans-Pacific Partnership talks

Even though Europe was at the top of everyone's mind at the summit, behind the scenes Canadian officials were trying to wrap up a long-standing negotiation with the Americans.

Canadian officials met late into Monday night with representatives from the United States. The prime minister followed up Tuesday morning with a one-on-one meeting with U.S. President Barack Obama.

Harper then announced Canada has been asked to sit at the negotiating table for the proposed Trans-Pacific Partnership.

"Opening new markets and creating new business opportunities leads to jobs, growth and long-term prosperity for all Canadians," the prime minister said in a statement.

The announcement came a day after G20 host nation Mexico was invited to join the talks.

Nine countries are currently negotiating a free-trade pact that many feel will have more economic strength than the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Gen Y splurging on luxuries: AMEX

Young and trendy members of Generation Y are outspending older Canadians in the luxury markets for fashion, travel and fine dining, according to a report released Tuesday.

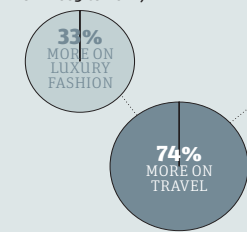

The American Express Business Insights report, based on spending data collected from 2009 to 2011, found that Canada's luxury segment has been more resilient to economic uncertainty than markets in Europe and the U.S., dominated by demand from younger people.

"Optimism amongst Canadians appears to be on the rise as luxury spending increased," the credit-card company said in a release.

"What has proven most surprising is that in a soft job market, younger Canadians are dominating Canadian luxury spending growth in the core areas of fashion, travel and fine dining."

Luxury spending among young people has increased in recent years even as they face piles of debt from more schooling than prior generations, weak job prospects and an unemployment rate that is about twice the national average.

The findings also suggest the Canadian luxury segment was less impacted during the height of the economic downturn and recovered more quickly than in the U.S. and Europe, which have yet to return to pre-recessionary spending levels in the market.

Canada's luxury segment was down about nine per cent in 2009, compared to a 14 per cent decline in the U.S. and 10 per cent drop in Europe.

"What we've seen in Canada is that, even during economic uncertainty, consumers are not shying away from luxury spending," said Colin Temple, vice-president and general manager of merchant services at American Express Canada.

Canadian luxury spending has increased since 2009 and younger Canadians have ramped up spending faster during the survey period than their older counterparts.

Meanwhile, older generations that once dominated the luxury market showed a slowdown in spending growth over the same period.

Energy. Alberta looks to boost uses of natural gas

Alberta's premier says the province is looking at ways to boost the use of natural gas, including using it as a transportation fuel, at a time when dismal prices have been pinching producers as well as government coffers.

"This is part of the direction we need to go in, because the circumstances have changed to the point where these decisions, that can be made on behalf of government, start to make economic sense — for us and for industry," Alison Redford told a conference on unconventional natural gas Tuesday.

Redford concedes there are barriers to the idea, including the great expense of building refuelling infrastructure and the high purchase price of vehicles that can run on natural gas.

Alberta premier Alison Redford

"It's time for us to have these conversations," the premier said.

"It will make a difference to the way that we live. It's something that people in our society are talking about. And it needs to be part of what we do in the future."

JUST SAYIN'

Open letter to Rob Ford, mayor of Toronto:

OK, as PR campaigns go, "Cut the Waist" collapsed under its own weight.

It's hard enough pledging to lose 50 pounds in five months, never mind with the whole nation looking on and making fun.

And then, whenever you do turn up to weigh in, a bunch of media jackals pound you with rude questions about transit and budgets.

It's even harder when you fall off the scale on the final weigh-in, 33 pounds from your goal, as the peanut gallery laughs even harder.

We can all relate, Rob

"In fact, according to the United Nations, three-quarters of North Americans are overweight. You're not alone."

But I want you to know: You're my inspiration, Big Guy.

Look, you're not the mayor of Toronto because you're the intellectual heir to Albert Einstein. You're the mayor of Toronto because regular people can relate to you. And regular people struggle with their weight. In fact, according to the United Nations, three-quarters of North Americans are overweight.

You're not alone.

Take me, for instance. I'm a meat yo-yo. I find it easy to lose weight ... and I find it even easier to put it back on again. In January, when you joined your brother Doug and pledged to lose 50 pounds, I was 40 pounds overweight and contemplating a trip to Mr. Big and Tall for a wardrobe upgrade.

I figured if the Big Guy could wrap his meaty paw around a stick of celery, well, so could I. And as you took the heat, I got out of the kitchen. Since January, I've lost 31 pounds and "Freedom 40" is in sight. Plus I've managed to get on and off the scale without injuring myself. Bonus.

Although I've managed to keep my jaw shut at key moments, it hasn't been easy. You were subject to ridicule when you were discovered slinking out of KFC. Let me say that I am haunted daily by KFC. I could eat a whole family bucket of that stuff and then hit the fries and gravy.

And it's not just KFC. That A&W Root Bear relentlessly pursues me with discount coupons. And every day at quit-tin' time, the hungriest time, I have to walk past the best pizza joint on the planet and all those succulent slices laid out on the slab. The aroma alone is fattening.

The glass is half empty, and that's a good thing. You're 13 pounds lighter than you were in January. You proved to yourself and the rest of Fat City that you can lose weight if you put your mind to it.

Keep going. Do it for yourself, and no one else.

And I'll see you on the skinny side.

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford had his final weigh in Monday, where he missed his weight-loss target by 33 pounds and then fell off the scale.

Prince condemns horn poachers

In a rare interview, Prince William has condemned people involved in the illegal trade of rhino horns as "extremely ignorant, selfish and utterly wrong." He was speaking in Port Lympne Wild Animal Park in Ashford, Kent, south-east England, to meet three endangered black rhinos before they were reintroduced into the wild in Tanzania. METRO

It's a message about educating people and understanding that when you buy that rhino horn, or when you buy that ivory, you are taking this from an animal that has been slaughtered for this decorative ornament you have on your mantelpiece and you have at home. Is that really what you desire and what you feel is right in the world?"

black rhinos are left in the wild in Africa, with experts saying the animal is being slaughtered at the rate of two a day.

Demand puts rhinos on brink

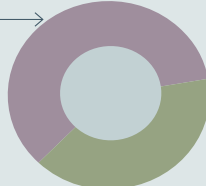

Black rhinoceros, native to eastern and central areas of Africa, have been poached to the brink of extinction due to the demand for their horn, both for use in Chinese traditional medicine and for traditional Yemeni dagger handles. Experts estimate that around 95 per cent of the black rhino population has been lost. A single horn can fetch $250,000 US. METRO

Ever wanted to see Shia LaBeouf naked?

If Sigur Ros' new video were a movie, it might merit an NC-17 rating. For the band's clip of Fjogur Piano released Monday, Transformers star Shia LaBeouf appears naked.

Alma Har'el directed the video. It is part of a series being created for the band's latest album Valtari. The video also features female nudity, dancing, an octopus, lolipops and trippy images. Band bassist Georg Holm said the director and LaBeouf collaborated on the idea for it. Holm described it as "absolutely amazing." Videos don't come with ratings. Brave girls. The new generation of movie princesses do so much more than wait for Prince Charming to save the day

When one thinks about movie princesses a few names come top of mind: Snow White, Cinderella, Aurora and Belle. This fab four have come to define what being a movie princess is all about. Or at least they used to.

Once upon a time a movie princess was a damsel in distress, swathed in pink and jewels, waiting for Prince Charming to come to the rescue.

Lately, however, the movies have given us a different kind of princess, one who is more into grrrl-power than girly-girl.

Mark Andrews, the co-director of this weekend's cinema release Brave, the story of a Celtic princess who rebels against her mother, calls the movie's lead character "an anti-princess."

"She's an active and action-oriented person," he says. "She wants to get out in the outdoors of the Highlands, escaping from castle life and exploring the woods."

Brave isn't the first movie to shatter the stereotype of the pretty pink princess.

According to Roger Ebert, Ariel, the teenage mermaid princess of The Little Mermaid, "is a fully realized female character who thinks and acts independently, even rebelliously, instead of hanging around passively while the fates decide her destiny."

In other words, she still marries her prince charming, but for the first time a Disney princess gave a lesson in independence and had a hand (or fin) in deciding her fate.

The success of that movie led to a new batch of princesses who were empowered and could look after themselves and others.

Pocahontas was an adventurous princess who put her own life at risk to stop a war between her people, the Powhatans, and the British settlers, and the fiery Mulan broke gender boundaries by enlisting in the army and saving China from total devastation at the hands of the Huns.

Jasmine, the daughter of the wealthy Sultan of Agrabah and the princess at the heart of Aladdin, didn't fight off invaders but she did do something that made her unique in the Disney princess world.

Tired of life in the royal palace, instead of waiting for rescue, the independently minded noblewoman made her own way, even deciding to marry a commoner rather than a prince.

But not all anti-princesses are animated.

The recent mega-flop John Carter featured Martian Princess Dejah Thoris (Lynn Collins) who, despite falling for the prince charming title character, was also a warrior and a scientist who wasn't afraid to stand up for things she believed in.

History gets a bloody makeover in Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter

Take that, Twilight. Film gives a unique twist on the civil war as the 16th U.S. president makes it his mission to eliminate deadly blood suckers

MICHELLE CASTILLO
Metro World News

Despite the fact that Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter makes some bold claims about the "real" life of the 16th U.S. president, author and screenwriter Seth Grahame-Smith took painstaking effort to make sure the film was as historically accurate as possible.

Well, except for the parts with the fangs.

"In the opening of the movie, there's a quote that says 'History prefers legends to men,'" Grahame-Smith explained to Metro. "That's the truth: We've made Lincoln a legend, and we forgot that he was also a man.

Benjamin Walker portraying Abraham Lincoln, left, and Dominic Cooper as Henry Sturgis in a scene from Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter. (STEPHEN VAUGHAN/20TH CENTURY FOX/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

This film deals much more with the man of Lincoln than the myth or the legend."

While the movie's title Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter is certainly absurd, the cast and crew of the film insist that the jokes end there. Instead of turning the project into a spoof of U.S. history, the film emphasizes the flaws that made Lincoln such a great humanitarian.

Producer Tim Burton and director Timur Bekmambetov (Wanted) use the backdrop of the Civil War to weave an action-filled tale about how one poor individual with a life full of tragedy could become one of America's most respected men.

Bekmambetov explained foremost this movie is about the boy who would become Lincoln and the personal motivations that led him to change the course of history. In a way, the director points out, it's not just a historically based film — it's a superhero movie.

"It's not about vampires," Bekmambetov said. "This is the most important part: When you see a young boy, and suddenly he becomes Lincoln and emotionally you understand it." "It's the most powerful special effect of the movie," he added.

Grahame-Smith agrees. "What was the cool thing about having a Russian director make this movie was he didn't bring in any of that sort of emotional baggage to it," Grahame-Smith said. "He was able to approach Lincoln as a man before a myth."

Keeping with being as accurate as possible, the team decided to shoot the film in 3D because of actual 3D photos from the Civil War era they had uncovered from their research. Bekmambetov saw it as a way to bring people in the middle of all the action.

"Based on those photographs, it just seems completely obvious and the right tool for this particular production. It brings you there. And, again it was very clear from these photographs it was exactly the way to go," Burton explained.

But, it's hard to deny that Lincoln's axe-wielding skills and ability to slice off people's heads with one blow is what drew people's attention in the first place. It's the element of the fantastical that changes this regular history lesson into something a bit more interesting.

"Nobody has made this kind of movie before," Bekmambetov claimed. "There's no way the audience can say, 'No, I saw this many times.' No, we don't have this problem."

Exploring the Boss as a political musician

New book. Bruce Springsteen and the Promise of Rock 'N' Roll looks at the evolution of the artist and celebrity

PAT HEALY
Metro World News

Marc Dolan doesn't concern himself too much with the dirty details of Bruce Springsteen's private life. The author instead takes an unusually scholarly approach to the Boss in his new book, Bruce Springsteen and the Promise of Rock 'N' Roll.

Dolan, a professor at John Jay College and the City University of New York, listened to more than 100 full concerts for clues to piece together the 50-year artistic and political evolution of his subject — but finishing it proved a little difficult.

"I started the book before the last two chapters happened, which, looking back, is an insane leap of faith," says Dolan. "As I was working on the drafts, the ending became a moving target."

His subject is anything but static. In the span of three years, the singer jumped from had to re-write the last chapter."

Dolan says the book wasn't exactly an easy sell for publishers, when they learned that he would be exploring Springsteen's place in American culture, and not salacious rumors.

"I had to convince the sales staff at the press," says Dolan. "When I was writing it up, I said, (it's really) a love story between an artist and his audience. Part 1: Artist meets audience. Part 2: Artist and audience have some good times together. Part 3: Artist and audience break up, seemingly over politics, but actually over communication, which is the problem with any relationship. Part 4: They come back together with a renewed understanding of how they relate to each other."

Pixar's new movie Brave takes place in 10th-Century Scotland. HANDOUT

Scotland — home of castles and the Brave

Pixar. Latest animated film inspires travel to mysterious, historic Scottish sites

NED EHRBAR

Metro World News in Hollywood

Quoted

"When you're dealing with ancient Scotland, every single item — every stone, every tree, every structure — has a tremendous sense of history to it..."

John Lasseter, Pixar head

An animated film may seem like odd inspiration for a vacation, but the folks behind Pixar's latest, Brave, put such painstaking work into digitally recreating Scotland that you won't be able to help but want to go visit. After all, the filmmakers can't have all the fun.

Teams from Pixar headed to Scotland twice during preparation for the film, first to find inspiration and again to take samples to get the natural beauty just right — which turned out to be more difficult than expected.

"The reason Brave is so incredibly challenging is because the computer likes to make things perfect, geometric," says Pixar head John Lasseter.

"When you're dealing with ancient Scotland, every single item — every stone, every tree, every structure — has a tremendous sense of history to it with layers of moss and dirt and wear from the weather. There's a certain level of detail that you need to have in order to make this kind of environment believable."

Co-director Steve Purcell admits that while they were in Scotland on business, it never really felt like work.

"It's definitely fun. We did a lot sketching and drawing, and we'd meet the local people in whatever town and ask them what kind of folklore and stories they had," Purcell says.

"(Ardanaisig Hotel) was one of our favourites, just because it was so colourful. The owner's son gave me a wooden cross to take to my room that night. He said, 'I hope you're very strong because you have a strong ghost.'"

That sense of folklore and mystery permeates Scotland, explains Brave director Mark Andrews, who was already a fan of the country after spending his honeymoon there.

"Nothing didn't have a story. Every creek and branch and thing," he says.

"We got back and (while) developing the film, we wanted that aspect in there that every character is telling a story or knows a story, or there's a story about everything that's happening in Brave, so you get story upon story upon story upon story upon story, interwoven in the actual movie."

While clearly a big fan of Scotland, Andrews has trouble narrowing down the best places to visit.

"Well, there's Loch Maree up in the Torridons, which is phenomenal. There's a little town called Ullapool, which I know is werewolf-infested," he says.

"On the Isle of Skye, we saw the Queen of the Faeries mound. There are these strange dolomite things in this valley, and nobody lives on that side of the valley because they think it's fairy-haunted."

So, we tried to do the job for him, picking the best Brave-inspired locations for your itinerary. See left panel for details.

Dunnottar Castle

A ruined medieval fortress on the north-east coast of Scotland dating back to the 15th or 16th century, this imposing outpost was the starting point for designing the Dunbroch castle featured in the film.

Glen Affric

The quintessential mysterious Scottish forest, this nature reserve in the Highlands is possibly the best example of a glen, with moss and heather covering the ground. With the River Affric running through, there's ample opportunities for hiking, rafting and swimming.

Isle of Skye

The largest island of the Inner Hebrides, the Isle of Skye is rife with both local folklore and sweeping Highland landscapes. Highlights include the enchanting Faerie Glen, the odd-shaped rock formations of the Quiraing and the 200-foot sea cliff Kilt Rock.

Scènes de la vie de bohème: BoBo hunting in Paris

French hipsters?

Known for their good taste, hitting up BOurgeois BOhemian haunts might make your trip more fun

AURÉLIE
RESCH

Life@metronews.ca

Want to try something different while in Paris? Try to look out for BoBos.

BOurgeois BOhemians are people you might tag as shabby chic urban upper class. They prefer to live in a lively neighbourhood with tiny stores that will fill their appetite for expensive organic food, handmade clothes and artifacts and for a "selective social life."

They have strong opinions they won't fight for. They will not market their fortune but they will be on top of the latest gadget innovations. They are handsome, educated and they have good taste. They are a curiosity by themselves.

How do you identify a BoBo? "You ask someone if he/she is one. If they answer they're not, then you've just met one," Alexander, my city guide told me.

Where do you find them? Where it is pleasant — but expensive — to live. I stopped asking questions when we started walking in the streets of Montmartre, a well known bastion in Paris for BoBos.

Along Rue des Abbesses, small shops tempt the visitor with unique clothing and art, while culinary and fresh food stores distill delicious smells.

Lacing up to the church Sacré Coeur, charming paved streets host famous restaurants such as le Moulin de la Galette — painted by Jean Renoir, notorious theatres such as Ciné 13, which produces creative and unique shows, and lovely plazas which pay tribute to celebrities.

Behind the plaza dedicated to famous French singer Dalida, who lived and died in Montmartre, BoBos will diligently play the pétanque, a game played with metallic balls very popular in southern France.

A bit further, a statue representing a man walking through a wall pays tribute to the hero of Marcel Aymé's short story le Passe Muraille and invites lovers to kiss on the bench.

My next stop for BoBo hunting will be the neighbourhood le Marais — the third arrondissement, or neighbourhood.

Le Marais is famous for its art galleries, trendy restaurants and BoBo population. Wealth is more prominent in this enclave than in Montmartre. Avid art lovers, BoBos adore le Marais with its elegant façades and its 18th century hotels. Here, luxury is elegance, and seduction stems from discretion.

I spend some time at beautiful Musée Picasso and in front of the Hotel Salé, a marvel from the 18th century. I pause in front of upscale boutiques and walk to le Marché des enfants rouges — the city's oldest market — to indulge in one of its many culinary boutiques and stands.

It is in Rue Mouffetard, 13th arrondissement, that BoBos pursue their quest of "bien-être," or well-being, and experience a quality of life different from most Parisians, even though they inhabit the same city.

Rue Mouffetard is one of the oldest streets in Paris. It is filled with unpretentious but lovely buildings with nice façades and exceptional food stores and flower shops. Each of these boutiques is a delight for the senses. Everything is beautiful, aromatic and tasty.

In Rue Mouffetard, people take time to walk, talk and laugh with merchants and pedestrians. Muguet, my guide, took me on a culinary tour in this unique area and educated me on picking up the freshest products.

After a few days wandering in Paris, you might not become an artist, nor will you live in a loft apartment in one of these divine arrondissements, but you may very well be able to embrace the Parisian "joie de vivre" and know how and where to look to fill your desire for beauty and taste.

Jobs in skilled trades are plentiful, but where are the applicants?

ARINA KHARLAMOVA
TalentEgg.ca

What do high school, close relatives and the overwhelming pressure from society have in common? Their ignorance of the strength, satisfaction and success that comes from a career in the skilled trades.

Skills Canada and the Canadian Apprenticeship Forum conducted an Ipsos-Reid study in 2004, which found that "60 per cent of youth reported that their parents have not encouraged them to consider a career in trades"; whether that is

In the next 20 years, 40 per cent of new jobs in Canada will be in skilled trades and technologies. ISTOCK because their parents wanted them to be all-revered lawyers and doctors, or because skilled trades are socially associated with low caliber, high-stress jobs that earn very little and ask a lot is irrelevant.

These statistics are prevalent, even though news media is full of bursting with stories of unemployed university graduates, graduates unable to find jobs in their fields, or those that graduated into jobs they hate.

So why is university still the top choice when skilled trades — which can include construction, transportation, manufacturing, and service industries — are such lucrative careers with such an available variety of choice?

Because many Canadians are completely unaware of the benefits and opportunities that are available in skilled trades, and thus do not consider it in their decision-making.

Sarah Watts-Rynard, the Executive Director of the Canadian Apprenticeship Forum, says that, "There's a lot of misconceptions about skilled trades in our society, and good reasons for them. Over the years, every parent has always wanted his or her child to do better: have a better career and make more money and get ahead. But, in many cases, skilled trade occupations are some of the best paid available and offer a lot of flexibility for young people. If you go and get certified in a trade, you can move to any place in Canada or the world and have a job."

A report done by the Canadian Federation of Independent Business in 2003 revealed that, of the businesses surveyed, 50 per cent said that lack of qualified labour was one of their biggest problems. Fifty-six per cent of businesses claimed that it was necessary to hire someone unqualified or underqualified just to fill positions. Skilled trades are one of the most difficult industry jobs to fill, and yet they are integral to our society.

Alejandro Zambrano, a computer engineering student at Seneca and a graduate of George Brown's electromechanical engineering technician program, agrees: "If there were no skilled tradespeople, business people couldn't do anything. If there were no skilled tradespeople, houses wouldn't be built because you need builders, plumbers and electricians to build houses for realtors to sell, and for everyone else to live in."

The question about skilled trades is no longer about whether you should, but whether many other educational and career choices continue to make sense in comparison. Our country and many other countries around the world are experiencing severe recessions, which means that our youth should be encouraged to be practical and smart about their futures.

Recently, something began to bug me. When I do graduate in two years, what will I have to show for it? I'll be a fresh new graduate from a popular university with a bachelor's degree, but so will everyone else! Surely we will have some work experience — summers at the local grocery store, lifeguard at the pool, waiter at a restaurant. But is that enough?

Would an employer (say the Canadian Youth Business Foundation, who is looking for a marketing coordinator) rather hire John, graduate of York University, with some summer work experience (waiter etc.), or Jasmine, graduate of Western University, with four to eight months (two summers) of experience working in a volunteer centre as a web and e-marketing assistant?

Jasmine would have developed a social media strategy, launched an e-marketing campaign, designed logos and graphics, and, ultimately, assisted the centre in developing a stronger online presence. She may not have been paid for her work at the centre but the employer does not know that or need to know that. All that matters is that her resumé lists this experience and proves that she would make a great candidate for the position.

Drill through skilled-trade stereotypes

Mind over misconception. Why women are making up a meager per cent of a booming workforce

ARINA KHARLAMOVA
TalentEgg.ca

When you imagine what a skilled tradesperson looks like, you probably picture a guy with a beard wearing a hard hat, work boots and dirty jeans. But what about the women?

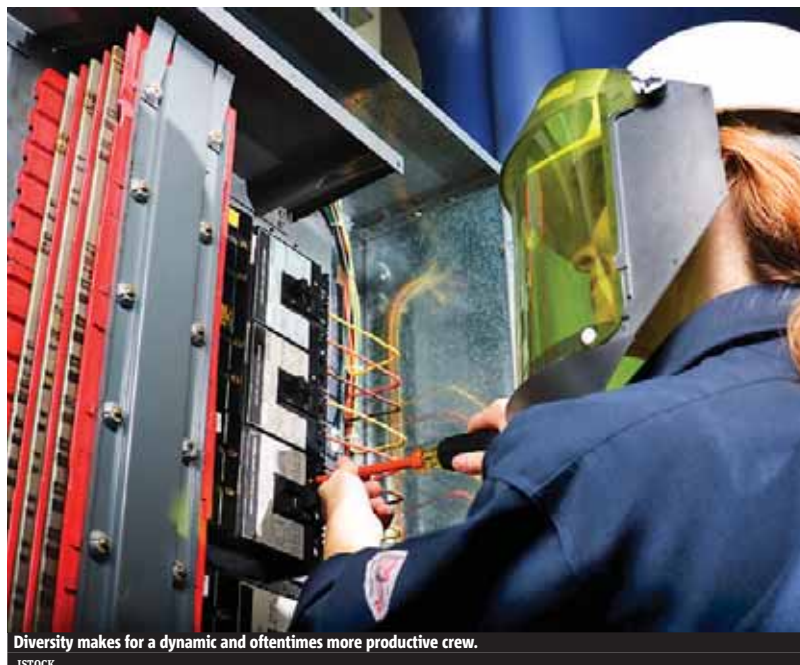

Women make up only five per cent of skilled tradespeople — meanwhile, 84 per cent of the people working in the hairstylist or aesthetician trades are women, according to Statistics Canada.

And the number of

Tips of the trade

If you're a young woman interested in pursuing a career in the skilled trades, here are a few tips to help you overcome the barriers mentioned above:

- Join professional associations for skilled tradespeople as well as industry associations to network with other people in your trade and industry.
- Get a mentor — or more than one — and don't just limit yourself to other women.
- Seek and apply for scholarships, bursaries and awards for women, Aboriginal peoples and visible minorities.

Diversity makes for a dynamic and oftentimes more productive crew.

women receiving trade qualifications in Canada has been dropping steadily, from 17 per cent in 1992 to five per cent in 2007.

So why the trend?

Tina Kelly, co-chair of CCWEST (Canadian Coalition of Women in Engineering, Science, Trades and Technology) 2012 conference and the academic chair of the School of Trades and Technology at the Nova Scotia Community College, says that even in this day and age, women can be discriminated against in the skilled trades workforce.

"Women are usually in the top 10 to 15 per cent of their class, but they are almost always among the last 10 per cent to get hired."

Also, according to the Government of Canada's Skilled Trades website, there is currently a negative perception towards skilled trades among youth and their influences, with many believing that these jobs are low-paying, involve physical work, are dirty, and are less academically challenging.

This is simply not the case for many skilled trades jobs and should not be considered the norm. Non-traditional skilled trades jobs for women (everything apart from hairstylist or aesthetician) are incredibly difficult to break into and succeed at because of these misconceptions.

"Most companies that make the leap to hire a female worker, or two or three or four, have nothing but good experiences. Their workforce tends to be more creative and active because any balance in a diverse workforce is going to be better," says Kelly.

Plus, with the high wages of many skilled trade careers, "single moms that can't make it on administrative work can now support families, buy their own homes, and are role models for their families and for their communities," says Kelly.

The companies that are yelling "SKILLS SHORTAGE" should be paying close attention to the enrollment of women into trades programs as a big part of the possible solution.

"Unfortunately," says Kelly, "you need to apprentice for three to four years to become proficient for a trade, and some women don't make it because of the stigma and the discrimination in many trade environments."

It is always a struggle for the first few women in that company or that trade because they are the ground-breakers."

Author Albert J. Bernstein arms readers with tools to ward off 'emotional vampires'

BRUCE WALSH

Metro World News in Philadelphia

Since the mid-90s, Dr. Albert J. Bernstein has been attempting to share wisdom from the psychology profession with everyday employees. In books like Dinosaur Brains, Am I the Only Sane One Working Here? and Neanderthals at Work, he navigates the seamy underbelly of office politics through the lens of a trained psychologist.

One of his most popular — Emotional Vampires: Dealing with People Who Drain You Dry — was re-released with added material last month. In Vampires, Bernstein offers strategies for dealing with known personality disorders.

"I'm trying to help people recognize these kinds of people and to understand them, so they can decide for themselves whether they want to take them on or avoid them," says Bernstein. "What I'm describing, essentially, are the things that make difficult people difficult. It's about recognizing the pattern and choosing the strategy that works best with that pattern."

For Bernstein, an emotional vampire, by definition, also holds many seductive powers.

"They're Ferraris in a world of Toyotas. We expect so much more from them," says Bernstein. "And, of course, we are always let down, because these are people who are not playing by the same rules as us."

Nightmare bosses

According to psychologist and author Albert J. Bernstein, those with two specific personality disorders often become managers:

- The narcissist. "There is plenty of narcissism without greatness, but no greatness without narcissism. Who would have the chutzpah to climb the ladder without it? But narcissists have very little idea of how they relate to other people. They are able to pull a curtain over one part of their personality and say, 'This doesn't matter.'"
- The histrionic. "They are experts at looking good, with very little substance. ... They're the people that give us the motivational rallies. They're cheerful. They look good. They're can-do. But when it comes to resolving dilemmas, they're not very good at making tough decisions. They don't want to upset anybody."

Euro 2012. England gets victory over Ukraine amidst controversy over a disallowed goal

Only one goal counted, and it belonged to Wayne Rooney.

The England striker returned from a two-match suspension to head in the lone goal Tuesday and give his team a 1-0 win over Ukraine and a spot in the European Championship quarter-finals. The co-host Ukrainians, however, will leave the tournament knowing that things could have been different.

Needing a win to advance, the Ukrainians thought they had equalized in the 62nd minute when Marko Devic's looping shot appeared to cross the line before it was hooked clear by England defender John Terry. But the goal was not awarded by the referee or his extra assistant, who was half-standing on the field only a few metres from the post.

"The goal that wasn't given

Sweden tops France

- France limped into the knockout round of Euro 2012 despite a 2-0 loss to Sweden in its final group game, showing how much the team needs to improve to be true contenders.

really changed our plan because if it was given, I think the whole game could have looked another way," Ukraine captain Andriy Shevchenko said through an interpreter. "We tried to give Ukraine a gift but we weren't able to do it."

Although a draw still would have eliminated them, the equalizer would have given the team hope knowing that another goal would put Ukraine through to the quarter-finals.

The controversy will likely add to the pressure on UEFA president Michel Platini to reverse his opposition to goal-line technology.

England captain Steven Gerrard whipped a cross into the penalty area that glanced off two defenders before Ukraine goalkeeper Andriy Pyatov let it slip through his hands as he crouched to collect the ball. Rooney was primed at the far post and made it count.

"I was always putting myself in goal-scoring opportunities," Rooney said. "I could've done better with a couple more but I got the goal and it's three points."

Rooney missed the first two Euro 2012 matches through suspension. He was sent off in the team's last qualifier in October.

With the victory, England won Group D and will next face Italy in Kyiv on Sunday.

LeBron James better get well fast. He's about to play for a championship.

Hardly able to move, James returned from a left leg injury to make the tiebreaking three-pointer with 2:54 remaining and the Miami Heat held off Russell Westbrook and the Oklahoma City Thunder for a 104-98 victory on Tuesday night and a 3-1 lead in the NBA finals.

With James watching the final moments, Mario Chalmers finished off a stellar 25-point effort that matched Dwyane Wade. James had 26 points, 12 assists and nine rebounds, only missing a triple-double because he was on the bench at the end after hurting his leg with a fall to the court.

Game 5 is Thursday night and James will have a chance to finish a championship chase that started in Cleveland before he famously — or infamously — left for South Florida. No team has blown a 3-1 lead in the finals.

"Whatever it takes. No excuses," Wade said. "You don't want to leave this arena saying you missed opportunities."

Westbrook scored 43 points for the Thunder, who wasted an early 17-point lead but were never out of the game because of their sensational point guard.

Caddy's XTS steps up to the plate

ALL PHOTOS WHEELBASE

Aesthetics

Visually, the XTS comes across as much leaner and tauter than its predecessor, although its chiselled nose and tail and a high beltline are common to the Cadillac fleet. Overall, the XTS's elegant, original design clearly distinguishes it from its European counterparts.

Safety features

Like most vehicles in its class, the XTS has a laundry list of safety electronics and warnings. The Driver Awareness Package includes lane-departure warning that alerts you if an unintended lane change is imminent. As well, forward collision alert warns of a too-rapid closing speed to the vehicle in front.

2013 Cadillac XTS

- Type. Four-door, front-/all-wheel-drive full-size luxury sedan.
- Engine (hp): 3.6-litre DOHC V6 (304).
- Mileage: L/100 km (city/hwy): 11.5/7.5 (est., FWD).
- Base Price (incl. destination): $50,600.

There are no plans for a V8 option, but a plug-in gasoline-electric hybrid is reportedly in the pipeline.

Engine

No XTS pilot will be overwhelmed by the powertrain. For now, the sole choice is a 304-horsepower 3.6-litre V6 that operates through a six-speed automatic transmission with manual shift controls. All-wheel-drive can be added to the three trim levels — Luxury, Premium and Platinum — above the base XTS.

Review. Faced with whether to keep the STS or the DTS, Cadillac did the only sensible thing: it replaced both

MALCOLM GUNN
Wheelbase Media

Cadillac is shaking up its product line in a big way and the XTS sedan literally plays the biggest part in General Motors' premium division.

For the 2013 model year, the XTS becomes the flagship of Cadillac's passenger-car fleet, replacing both the front-wheel-drive DTS and the rear-wheel-drive STS.

At the opposite end, the equally new ATS becomes Caddy's smallest and least-expensive car (the mid-range CTS stands pat).

As with the DTS, the XTS (which is arriving at dealerships now) is front-wheel-drive.

It's a platform that will also be used for the 2014 Chevrolet Impala. As big as it is, the XTS is about 14 centimetres shorter and five centimetres narrower than the DTS and is also 10 centimetres shorter between the front and rear wheels.

But don't let the shrinkage fool you as the revised proportions, including a shorter hood and a higher roofline, mean greater interior room. According to Cadillac's tape measure, there's more rear-seat and trunk space than a BMW 5 Series, Mercedes-Benz E-Class and an Audi A6.

Since the XTS is a Cadillac, there are almost unlimited comfort and convenience items, many of which are standard in the $50,600 (including destination costs) base car.

That price seems reasonable given the car's cutting-edge looks and content and the fact that other premium automakers charge as much or more for their higher-end models.

The subtle integration of wood-coloured finishes, mixed with silvery pieces, is a very elegant touch.

Although noticeably smaller than the previous DTS model, the XTS's interior volume has increased. That's because modern designs have less front-rear overhang, which helps tighten up the packaging.

By comparison

1 Mercedes-Benz E-Class
Base price: $65,500

2 Hyundai Equus
Base price: $66,300

3 Jaguar XF
Base price: $61,200

A no-spill, no-waste funnel

Funnels are great until whatever you're filling up is full, and there's still liquid in the funnel ... and then the entire contents of the funnel ends up on the ground. Proform Tools No-Mess Funnel prevents overspills with a patented ball-and-hook design that opens up the funnel spout to allow virtually any type of liquid to flow. Once maximum capacity is reached, removing the funnel instantly closes the opening, allowing leftover fluid still in the funnel to be returned to the container. Sounds amazing, but what's even more amazing is that you can purchase a No-Mess Funnel for just five bucks. The order form and descriptive video are available at proformtools.com.

V8 Explorer a safe bet for the family

Second Gear.

2006 to 2010
Ford Explorer

JUSTIN
drive@metronews.ca

Shopping used? Have a family or boat and need a four-wheel drive that's spacious and tough? The Ford Explorer is worth a look.

Available in its last generation from 2006 to 2010, riding an actual "truck" frame platform and fitted with a real four-wheel drive system, Explorer was engineered for real-life capability.

Feature content included Ford's keypad system, automatic climate control, power-adjustable pedals, heated leather, a sunroof and more.

Common Issues

On earlier models, check the transmission for smoothness while shifting between reverse and drive, and note any slipping or hesitation when accelerating from a stop.

Any drivability issues related to the six-speed transmission (standard on V8-powered models) are likely computer-related and not catastrophic.

The five-speed automatic teamed up with the V6 engine is noted to be more problematic and less robust, making the V8 powertrain a more sensible choice. Some stalling issues were also noted on the V6-powered models, backing this point.

On any Explorer, check for proper air conditioning performance, and have the underside of the vehicle checked for fluid leaks — especially coolant leaks. Also have the underside checked out for signs of rust, off-road abuse and worn suspension components.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Engine

Look for four-wheel drive and automatic transmissions all around. Explorer's standard four-litre V6 engine made 210 horsepower, while a 4.6-litre V8 turned in 292 ponies.

What Owners Like

Looks, a stable and comfortable ride, and an overall "safe" feel to the last-generation Explorer were noted by many drivers. Many say Explorer feels "strong," rides well and has a fast-acting traction control system for stable performance.

What Owners Dislike

Common complaints aside from the standard SUV fuel-consumption gripes include limited at-hand storage space, and limited rear seat room.

Verdict

Used Explorer shoppers are advised to avoid the earlier years of this model and stick to V8-powered units where possible. A well-maintained Explorer free of notable issues should prove the most reliable.

DeltaWing loses race, wins hearts and minds

Autopilot

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

The Nissan DeltaWing definitely did not win last weekend's 24 Hours of Le Mans.

In fact, it didn't even finish — it was struck by another racer at about the six-hour mark, which forced its retirement.

Even if it would've managed to go the furthest at the 24-hour mark, it still wouldn't have been declared the winner. That's because the sanctioning body of the race only granted the DeltaWing team the last starting spot on the grid (No. 56) — a spot traditionally reserved for a car that is not allowed to race for points, but has the intent to advance motorsports technology in some meaningful way.

So DeltaWing couldn't win and it didn't win, but it easily had the most people pulling for it, and was the biggest story of the race.

This Batmobile-look-alike, the Nissan DeltaWing, was the underdog at a race on the weekend. CONTRIBUTED Why? Several reasons actually, and let's start with its looks.

This is definitely a case of one thing that doesn't look like the others. DeltaWing looks like a rocket laid sideways — small front, big rear. Most race cars look like they're ready to eat corners. The DeltaWing looks like it would rather not turn, thank you. So it's got some visual drama going for it, even though it seems incongruous with racing, or in fact, because of it.

It looks the way it does because of its unique mission — to complete the famous endurance race using half the fuel and half the tire material of an LMP1 class Le Mans racer. DeltaWing's engineers believe this is possible because they've designed the car to have half the aerodynamic drag and half the weight of a current LMP1 or LMP2 racer (1,000 lbs versus 2,000 lbs). This means DeltaWing can do its racing thing with a smallish engine. For Le Mans duty it was fitted with a 1.6-litre, four-cylinder engine producing 300 horsepower. This year's overall winner, the Audi V6 diesel "hybrid," had over 500 hp on tap.

During its best stint, DeltaWing was running a strong LMP2 pace and its fuel usage was on course to be half that of cars in the LMP1 class. So if you like rooting for an underdog, and a lot of people do, then the DeltaWing was your man.

But at the six-hour mark DeltaWing got clipped by another competitor and was forced into a concrete wall. Driver Satoshi Motoyama's post-crash actions were not typical fare. For example, he did not wave an angry finger to the driver that hit him, nor did he follow him to the paddock with the intent of punching him out, NASCAR style. Instead, he tried valiantly to repair the car roadside, as per the rules, so it could limp to the pits, where the team was allowed to help.

Now, everybody was rooting for Motoyama.

He struggled tirelessly for 90 minutes, with massive support from his team, who joined him to give instructions from trackside. In the end, however, it was just too damaged to move.

"Initially, we were completely gutted, but that feeling quickly gave way to huge sense of pride in what we have achieved," noted Darren Cox, general manager of Nissan in Europe, in a post-race press release.

Like we said earlier, it didn't win the race, but everyone involved, or rooting for it, felt something had been won.

Auto students learn computers as well as cars

Driving Force.

Prospective automotive technicians are getting much more 'technical' these days

drive@metronews.ca

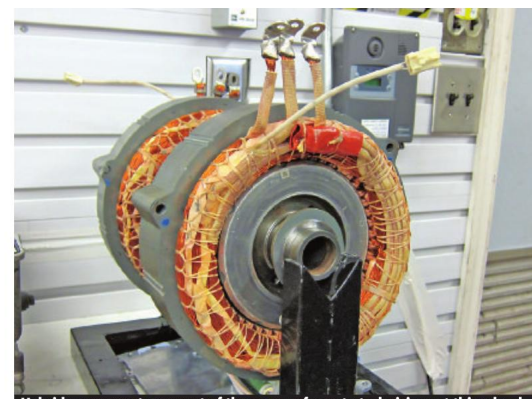

As auto innovations move ahead, the idea of technicians being merely "grease monkeys" is now firmly in the past. Students training for the trade must know as much about computers as they do about wrenches.

"It's not about 'hard parts' anymore," says Al Playter, an instructor in automotive and motorcycle programs at Toronto's Centennial College.

"We're now dealing with computerized systems that require diagnosis. In some cases we could have up to 55 or 60 onboard computers that not only process data but control the car. To successfully diagnose it requires sophisticated equipment, and the ability to interpret the data that you see."

Students in the program start with the basics in five disciplines: electronics and fuels; steering, suspension and brakes; powertrains; engines; and work practices and procedures, which includes computer skills, tools, measuring devices, air conditioning, lubricants, and bearings and seals. It takes three to five years to become a licensed technician.

- Being an automotive technician isn't cheap. A basic professional tool set, including the tool-box, is around $20,000, not including specialized equipment.

Playter says that electrical and fuel lessons are the toughest.

"We rate each of the courses when we're inputting marks, and the average of the other four disciplines is four to five degrees of difficulty. Electrical and fuel is 12. It's math and abstract thinking; it's not nuts and bolts."

Students also have to study hybrid vehicles, including safety when dealing with high-voltage equipment.

Despite all of the computers, though, parts still have to be replaced or fixed.

"Hammers, chisels, wrenches — we're still using them," Playter says. "That's still all part and parcel, regardless of how technical we get."

generate fault codes when something goes wrong, and the students can plug in diagnostic tools to access them, but it seldom comes down to the car simply "telling" the student what part to replace.

"The diagnostic equipment doesn't pinpoint the exact cause," Playter says.

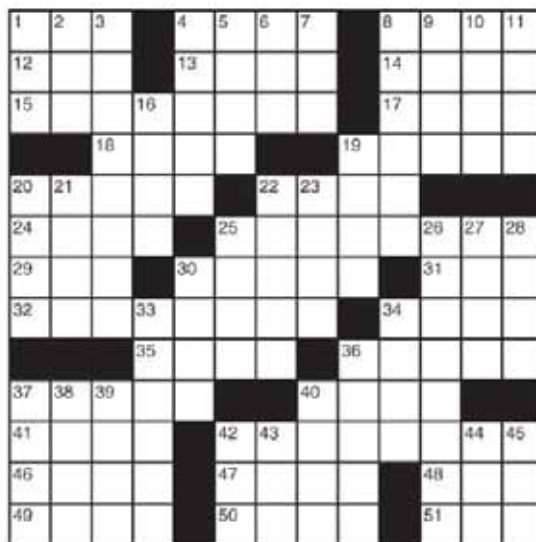

"It will tell you that something is wrong and this is the area where you're having a problem, but everything is integrated in the car now. If there's no fuel getting to the injectors, it doesn't necessar-

Horoscope

♈ Aries | March 21 - April 20.

Minor disputes will only turn major if you allow your emotions to rule you. On the home front, you should strive to be more forgiving of weakness.

♉ Taurus | April 21 - May 21.

As the Sun moves away from the money area of your chart today, you should consider giving up on a project that has not worked out the way you intended. Don't waste more time.

♊ Gemini | May 22 - June 20.

You may find yourself lacking in energy today but that's to be expected after all the efforts you've made in recent weeks.

♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22.

The Sun in your sign over the next four weeks will make all things possible, but don't go mad and start taking foolish risks.

♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22.

A clash of opinions is likely today and you are likely to be quite aggressive in defense of your views. Is it worth it?

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22.

There is no need to be cautious and there is no need to believe rivals are out to get you. Even if they are, you have what it takes to outwit them.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22.

The Sun crosses the career angle of your chart today, helping you to impress people in positions of power. Your ideas and actions will in turn have a big influence.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21.

You may be conservative by nature but that does not mean you are incapable of original thought — far from it in fact. Get together with like-minded people to work on an idea.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21.

It will pay you to be a bit more secretive today. There are some things that even your best friend should not know about you.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan. 20.

You are midway through your solar year, making this a good time to take stock of how far you have come and how far you still have to travel.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb. 18.

The Sun moves into the area of your chart that governs your work and your wellbeing today. Ask yourself: Am I happy with what I'm doing? Am I at my physical best?

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20.

As the Sun begins a four-week spell in the most dynamic area of your chart, you are full of big ideas and even bigger plans. SALLY BROMPTON
